

February 12th
GRIN Meeting

How can the GRPL help you with your invention?

Do you ever feel overwhelmed by the amount of information you need to gather to get your idea to the next level? Sometimes, do you feel like you have too many options at your disposal and you end up getting confused and burnt out? Join GRIN at our next meeting to learn about the resources and 1-on-1 assistance available through the Grand Rapids Public Library.

Our speaker, Steven Assarian, is the GRPL's Business Librarian. In this session, you'll learn:

- how research can build your business brain
- tactics to make your research more effective
- library research tools that can save you time and money
- how the library can help you build new skills

Speaker Bio: Steven has worked with the Grand Rapids Public Library as their business librarian for seven years. In this role, he's helped entrepreneurs, job-seekers, and nonprofit grant-seekers fulfill their goals and reach their potential. Previously, he served as a Public Services Librarian at Kettering University in Flint, Michigan. He has published a variety of different writing, including short stories and humor articles, and is in the process of being certified as a Certified Career Services Provider through the National Career Development Association

Location: The meeting will be at the GVSU Eberhard Center (301 Fulton W, Grand Rapids, MI 49504). Free parking is available at the Fulton Lot, located underneath the 131 overpass. If there is a parking lot attendant, let them know you're with GRIN. From the Fulton Lot, cross Fulton Street and the meeting space is on the second floor of the Eberhard Center. The meeting room is 215-A. There will be directional signage to the meeting room inside the building.
